PROJECT ACCOMPLISHMENT REPORTProject Description

Public service is more than just an ardent passion to alleviate the plight of the poor and the marginalized, to lead the improvement of various systems in government, or even to make a significant difference in the lives of our countrymen. Not to conclude that such personal fervor for change is unnecessary, but rather, to emphasize more the tenet that public service is more than just the desire to uplift the lives of people, but, fundamentally, a craft and a virtue - a profession that requires due prudence, knowledge, skills and abilities for the purpose of advancing the common good and affect significant, meaningful progress for the country.

Members of the Executive and Legislative Branches of Government do not only represent their constituents but more importantly, they play lead roles in defining change and development, and shaping the future of the nation. Indeed, anyone can be a public servant, but not everyone can be effective and ethical.

Learning the intricacies of public institution, the magnitude of attendant responsibilities, the pace of the dynamics inherent in the position and the astuteness in decision-making may not be mastered in one or several instances. Truly, there is no substitute for actual experience and the diligence required during one's performance in office.

Project Objective

The Executive Course on Setting the Tone for the First 100 Days on Legislative Governance was specifically designed for Senator Christopher Lawrence "Bong" Go. The Course was crafted to provide the participant-official and his team with fresh perspectives of their roles in government, especially, as major proponents of development. The Course Design was intended to equip the participants with technical and practical knowledge necessary to carry out their respective tasks, acquaint them with the processes and procedures in the legislative and executive branches of government, and provide a context from both the national and local levels of the government that will have strategic implications to the participants' respective development agenda. The original output of the Executive Course was a Legislative Agenda for the Senator. However, because of its extension, the output was revised to an assessment of the Legislative Agenda presented by the Senator and a Policy Foresight Responses and Futures of Legislative Governance.
